NILES WOMAN KILLED IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH AT ALTAMONT MONDAY

Mrs. C. M. Simpson Dies Before Medical Aid Can Be Called

Mrs. Carl M. Simpson, of Niles, was killed Monday night in an accident on the highway near Altamont Pass, when the car in which she and her husband were riding collided with an oncoming car and was thrown into the path of a heavy truck. All three vehicles, tangled hopelessly together, catapulted over a twenty-foot embankment and ended up in a deep ditch.

Harold Filkel, of Bakersfield, driver of the truck, was held by authorities pending a thorough investigation of the accident. Deputy Sheriff Grover Mull, Tuesday asked assistance of the Oakland police, in locating G. A. Johnson, of Oakland, who is alleged to have been driving the car with which Simpson collided. Evidently Johnson disappeared immediately after the accident occurred.

According to the reports of authorities who investigated the cause of the accident, Simpson was trying to pass Filkel's truck, when Johnson's car loomed up ahead. In the head-on crash that followed. Simpson's machine was hurtled into the path of the truck and all three cars swirled over the embankment. Mrs. Simpson died before medical aid could reach the scene.

Simpson, who was cut and bruised in the crash, was given treatment by a Niles physician.

Filkel was unhurt.

DEATH TAKES NILES WOMAN AFTER LONG ILLNESS ON JULY 26

Mrs. Phoebe Ford Succumbs After Protracted Illness

Mrs. Ford pased away at the home of her mother, Mrs. Teresa Richards, on Vallejo street, Niles, at aboot 5:30 p. m., July 26.

The daughter of Mrs. Teresa Richards and the late Israel Richards, Mrs. Ford was born in Niles in 1892. She spent practically her entire life in Niles, where she was prominent in the social life of the town. She was a member of the Niles Rebekah Lodge No. 336, I. O. O. F., and Protection Circle No. 189, and a member of the Stockton Neighbors of Woodcraft.

Mrs. Ford is survived by her husband, Willard O. Ford, and her mother, Mrs. Teresa Richards. She had one brother, Walter Richards.

Funeral was Saturday at 2:00 from the Garden Chapel of he Pratt Mortuary at Hayward, under the auspices of the Hazel Circle, No. 598, Neighbors of Woodcraft. From there the funeral progressed to the California Crematory.

Hoboes Make "Beverage" From Crushed Apricots

Not content with stealing apricots to eat in the original form, hobos making their "temporary homes" in the Niles and Centerville "jungles," have worked out a process for manufacturing a "heady" beverage from fruit taken from orchards of the vicinity at night.

Taking ripe fruit from the trees, or an occasional boxful, the itinerants retire to their jungle fastnesses and crush the fruit into a pulp. Setting the box at an angle so that the juice seeps into a container, the "boes" obtain a drink that borders on apricot brandy, if left to ferment.

To combat this new fad, growers are making sure that no boxes of fruit are left in the orchards at night ,and large dogs are being tied near the stacks in the fruit camps in many instances.

CELEBRATE 59th ANNIVERSARY

Celebrating their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary Saturday, July 29, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Thane were honored at an outdoor luncheon at their home. Many friends attended the affair to give the couple best wishes. Held in the attractive gardens, the luncheon was a delightful one.

COOLER, FOGGY DAYS HINDER APRICOT DRYING

Apricot producers who are drying their crop, this week ran into difficulties when the hot days gave way to foggy mornings and continued cool weather. With drying slowed up by the moist mornings, trays became scarce all over the southern part of the county.

According to growers, the season for drying could not have been much worse. Warm, sunny days from sunrise to sunset during the preceding weeks ripened the fruit to a point where it had to be picked immediately, then the coolness of the wheather this week slowed up the drying process, with volumes of fruit on hand to be cut immediately.

Those growers with a large surplus of trays are weathering the cool period successfully, whereas dryers with only normal equipment have been forced to double up the semi-dried fruit, several trays to one, or have found it necessary to purchase extra trays.

In view of the fact that the price for the dried product is increased this year, farmers are all the more anxious to harvest every bit of their crop.

Increasing the hardships of the grower is the scarcity of cutters. It was thought by many at the beginning of the season that the shortage would be temporary, as crop-followers were expected to flow into the region. The influx of workers has not been heavy, and local labor has beem completely absorbed by the unusually heavy activity in drying.

CLARENCE ROSE, NILES YOUTH, HELD FOR AN ATTEMPTED EXTORTION

Demands $500 From Niles Contractor Last Saturday

An attempt to extort a sum of money from a Niles man, by threatening the kidnapping of his 12 year old son, was thwarted early this week by the close vigilance of officers, and the cooperation of citizens of Washington township.

Clarence Rose, 24, and a native of Niles, was arrested following a three day watch by officers of the spot where the extortion money was to be left.

According to Frank Duarte, Niles contractor whose son, Francis, was the object of the kidnapper's threat, a letter was sent him from Hayward on July 15, containing the warning that his son would be spirited away unless the father left $500 in a water meter box on the road near the Zwissig dairy, north of Niles, on the night of July 21. Another letter followed, when Duarte failed to comply, instructing him to give no word to the police, on pain of being "put on the spot," and to have the money ready last Saturday night.

Duarte notified the authorities again and it was decided that Duarte place a letter pleading for time in the water meter box, as the threatening letters indicated. For three days officers kept a close watch on the box, and early Tuesday were rewarded for their patience when Rose was seen to go to the box and sieze the fake letter. He was trailed to the orchard of Joe Pine, north of the town, and siezed. Pine was held, it being his car Rose used.

According to Deputy Sheriff, Hugh Radbruch, Rose confessed that he was the author of the kidnap plans, and that Pine and Tony Rose, had nothing to do with it. After an invesigaion, Pine and Tony Rose were released.

In order to make the threatening letters sound more impressive, Rose had signed them "The Six of Us." Evidently with the additional purpose of diverting suspicions from himself. He said that he thought Duarte could easily spare the money.

Rose, who has been in extremely poor health, and had been confined to his bed for several months was Monday seen about the town of Niles. Several of his friends remarked on his recovery and said that they were glad to see him about again. Rose is said to have averred that he "would cheat the undertaker many times more."

When questioned as to his motive in demanding the money, Rose is said to have declared that he needed it to defray doctor bills. He said that the kidnapping racket seemed a likely way to secure funds, in view of the fact that kidnappers in the eastern states have been so "successful."

Duarte said that although he has known Rose for many years, he had never before had any reason for suspecting him of evil doing, and that he was extremely worried, and is glad to know that the threats came from no organized gang. In telling of his son's reaction to the threats, Duarte says that the boy was only mildly frightened, and said he "Wasn't afraid of kidnappers."

Rose is to be arraigned before Judge A. G. Norris tomorrow for a hearing on charges of attempted extortion.

NUCLEUS FORMED FOR COUNTY TAX LEAGUE

Washington, Murray, and Eden Township Units To Cooperate

In an effort to create a firm and comprehensive taxpayers' organization in Alameda county by September 1, on which date the county budget will be adjusted by the board of supervisors, the Washington Township Taxpayers' League, with the cooperation and help of Parker F. Braman, Eden Township Tax League head, is making a campaign for new members. Murray township, having recently formed an association of taxpayers, has stated its desire to act with the Eden and Washington township groups to form the nuceleus of a solid county organization.

It is the aim of the three township units to have a minimum membership of 2000 taxpayers earh by September 1, all three under the supervision of an executive secretary. The total of 6000 citizens of southern Alameda county will look to the secretary for contact with other tax groups, the board of supervisors, and channels of tax spending in the county.

The Berkeley Tax League and the Oakland Downtown Association have expressed their eagerness to cooperate with the southern county units, representatives of the two city gorups having met Friday with members of the Washington township unit executive committee to draw plans for a future common purpose.

According to George Roeding, Jr., Washington Township Taxpayers' League president, it is the goal of the league to form an association capable of handling the reduction of the larger county expenditures as efficienty as the individual units handled the reduction of excessive school costs in the smaller areas.

At the same time that the Washington township tax group is gaining new support, the Eden and Murray units are doing likewise. At some time within the month of August, the executive-secretary will be named, and plans completed or an effective demand for tax-relief.

In the opinion of the majority of taxpayers in Washington township, tax costs will be reduced only as much as is forced upon the tax-spenders. It is to this end that the cooperative tax units will strive.

All taxpaers who have not as yet joined the league are urged to do so, in order that the success of the campaign may be all the more assured.

SHUCKL CANNERY TO RUN FRUIT SALAD AUGUST 10

The Shuckl Cannery at Niles will open for a limited run on fruit salad on the 10th of August, according to word received this week from Wm. Jones, superintendant.

Jones said that the regular fruit salad crew would be employed for the run, but that people who had worked regularly in the cannery in previous years, and who were willing to go to the Shuckl plant at Sunnyvale, would be given employment. According to Jones, those who will furnish cars for the transportation of their fellow workers to the Sunnyvale branch, would receive compensation.

At the completion of the salad run, the salad crew will be taken to the Sunnyvale plant, to which machinery has been moved from the Niles cannery.

Jones said that a part of the fruit salad pack will be shipped to England.

FIRST DEER KILLED

Word from Mission San Jose Tuesday told that M. J. Overacker, was the first hunter to secure a deer in southern Alameda county this season. This is the first year that a Livermore nimrod has not claimed the honor. Andy Logan, of Centerville, a member of Overacker's party bagged a large mountain lion.

CHILD INJURED IN FALL

Alma Poggetto, aged 8, last Wednesday tripped and fell on the sidewalk near the corner of J street. She sufefred a small cut over the eye. She was treated by a local physician.

Accidentally Falls Into Window, Pays For It

Startled by the crash of breaking glass at 1:30 Sunday morning, Art Roderick, night watchman, arrived in a hurry at the front of the Lynch building on First street. Finding one of the panes in the door smashed out, but no one nearby, Roderick conducted a search in the immediate vecinity, which resulted in the collaring of a Niles man whose name is withheld by authorities.

Alleged to have been slightly worse for liquor, the window-breaker admitted that he had fallen through the pane while making his way down the street. Fearing that the tipsy one may have done further damage, or may have injured himself in some way, Roderck called Tom Silva and had the man placed in the Niles jail for the few hours remaining until morning.

Thoroughly sober the next day, the window-breaker willingly paid for the damage he had wrought, and was allowed to go home.

Itinerants Battle On Niles Streets; One Hobo Jailed

DEER TREMBLE AS NILES NIMRODS SET FORTH

Niles nimrods shouldered their guns Monday night and Tuesday morning struck out for various corners of the state where the deer are thickest. According to experienced hunters, the animals are more plentiful this season, several having been brought in already.

The two places in Niles where licenses and tags could be secured were Monday doing a brisk business, as enthusiastic sportsmen prepared for the chase.

Among the Niles hunters, who this week are searching out the "critters" with varying degrees of success are: Dale Carethers, Catherine Portale, George Rodrigues, Joaquin Martin, Carl Zwissig, Leon Vieux, Ray Compton, O. W. Ebright, Alfred Brown and Tony Alves.

Merchants of I street and pedestrians were last Thursday afternoon witnesses of a street fight in which the principals chased each other up and down the street with clubs, until Judge J. A. Silva happened along and deputized J. L. McMullen to arrest the more violent of the two, who was schooching that he intended to kill his opponent.

Both itinerants, who had been paid a small sum for working in a nearby fruit dryer, were disputing the division of twenty-five cents left after the purchase and consumption of a torrid stimulant known as "canned heat." The most abusive was turned over to the police officers and lodged in the Niles jail for the night.

Appearing the next morning before Judge Silva, the man, now sober, promised good behavior and was released, having committed no offense against which a complaint could be lodged.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Arnold and Mrs. E. Levi, all of San Francisco, were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. Martinelli.

TRY ANYTHING ONCE

The "National Recovery Act" is now winding up its arm preparatory to pitching us out of the depression. It may be a true panacea for all our ills, or but another "noble experiment." For several years now Washington has been blundering along, and each month things have gotten worse. Surplusses have dwindled or disappeared. At last we have reached a point where it is either quick recovery or apparent chaos. In view of this fact, the country is lining up almost solidly behind the new order of General Johnson, director of the NRA.

Regardless of how the individual may feel about adding expense to his already top-heavy load of operating costs, he is more than willing to try any expedient, however impractical it may seem to him.

While the writer is not at all enthusiastic over this latest rehabilitation plan, he will do his part uncomplainingly, hoping that his apprehensions are unfounded. He trusts that even the major principle of physics will be toppled over, and a man can, after all, lift himself up by his bootstraps.

TAXES, TAXES, TAXES

These are troublous times. Young people may not mind the financial worries and the political meddling and thievery that is rampant everywhere. Middle age and old age are getting tired. They are seeing the savings of a lifetime gradually dwindling away. New taxes are being levied everytime a tax-making body meets. No one would complain if every public economy had been instituted. But on the contrary, little effort has been made to lighten the tax burden by lopping off needless help in public service, and cutting salaries of those essential to necessary administration. As a concrete illustration, superior judges in Alameda county are drawing $10,000 a year. The legislature cut the salary to $8,000, and the governor vetoed the bill. It was not repassed over his veto. That is but one instance.

All we see is tax collectors. All we hear is tax, tax, tax, until we are sick, and ready to throw up our hands and quit. There is a limit, and we have reached that limit. We have been pressed about as far as we can be pressed. We can go no further. It has now reached a point of confiscation. Of course if we are going to continue to be gouged and do nothing about it, the average man might as well now as latter, buy a roll of blankets and

Young Lad Drowns In Pleasanton Pool

Lying face downward on the bottom of a swimming pool on the premises of Mrs. E. E. Hall, of Pleasanton, last Saturday morning the body of seven year old Richard Langdon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Langdon, 2233 McGee avenue, Berkeley, was discovered by playmates. The boy was rushed to the office of Dr. Richard Heinz, where after more than three hours' work at artificial respiration the lad was pronounced dead.

The boy, who is a grandnephew of Mrs. Hall, and who resides with his mother and a sister in Berkeley, came to Pleasanton with the others of the family Friday evening for a visit at the Hall place. Saturday morning, the two children donned their bathing suits and entered the swimming pool, a concrete tank, 20 by 50 feet in size and ranging in depth from one foot to six feet. The children could not swim. G. H. Jenkins sat in a chair near the pool and watched the two as they enjoyed themselves in the shallow portion of the pool.

After playing in the water for half an hour, declares Jenkins, the two children came out and dressed. They then went to another portion of the yard to play. Jenkins left the pool and went to the other side of the house.

Shortly after Virgilio Campagno and Mary Campagno, children of Mr. and Mrs. Mose Campagno, who live on the opposite side of the road from the Hall place, came to the tank for a swim. Mary slightly in advance of her brother, reached the rim of the tank first. Glancing into the water she cried:

"Oh, look! There's someone in the water."

Screaming out their alarm the two rushed to the house. Virgilio and Jenkins brought the body to the surface. It was in the deepest portion of the tank.

The unconscous child was taken to the office of Dr. Heinz, where a crew of volunteer first aid dressed. No one saw the boy fall workers, augmented by the city's respirator, aided the physician in his efforts to rekindle the spark of life. After three hours of effort they were compelled to give up hope.

When found the body was fully bert E. Vervais, who made an investigation, that the lad probably into the water, and it is the belief expressed by Chief of Police John Delucchi and Constable Alleaned over the water to reach a floating stick and lost his balance, plunging headlong into the tank.

No one heard a splash and it is impossible to ascertain how long the lad was in the water before he was discovered.

The pool where the stagedy occurred was a private one. It has been the custom of Mrs. Hall to permit the youngsters of the community to swim there during the summer months. Some older person was always present when the children were swimming.

Funeral services were held at Hall home Tuesday afternoon by the Rev. Robert C. Cross. The remains were then taken to Berkeley for interment.

DeerS eason Is Opened Tuesday

Sportsmen of Pleasanton township were busy last week shining their guns and getting their outfits in order for the opening of the deer hunting season, which opened in this district Tuesday morning.

Hunters from all over the county have been riding over the hills surrounding the valley for the past week looking for likely hunting grounds. Most land near Pleasanton is controlled by members of the Stockmen's Protective Association and hunting there is prohibited. The association has a large force of patrolmen on duty to arrest any one found tresspasing on lands controlled by members. Danger of fire and protection to cattle is said to have made necessary this ban on hunters.

Every hunter is permitted to kill two deer this season. Hunters must have hunting license and licenses and tags may be secured at the hardware store of Cruikshank and Kolln, in Pleasanton.

Hunting licenses this year cost two dollars, with an additional charge of one dollar for the tags. The tags last year cost two dollars.

The season will close September fifteenth.

"How to Win Men"

By CORONA REMINGTON

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service

ALMOST on the verge of tears Claire Newton sat curled up in the one big comfortable chair in her bedroom. Her chin cupped in her hand, she repeated the paragraph in "How to Win Men," chapter 12, page 226.

"Men like girls to do as they wish them to do, they like to feel that they are ruling things. Any girl who foolishly dares to have opinions contrary to her lover's—or refuses to do things he wants to do and think the way he thinks is imperiling her popularity."

Well, she had always done as Dick Barton had wanted. She had gone to the movies when she had wanted to dance. She had eaten in a restaurant when she had preferred preparing a supper and drive out to the country to eat it in some green pasture, beside a brook. She had done everything according to the directions given in "How to Win Men" and—she had failed.

Here was the last day of the second week slipping into eternity since Dick had not so much as called her—and she had liked him, more than she would admit even to herself. She loved his sunny manner, his tall, wiry slimness. She had thought that he liked her—a little perhaps. For weeks he had been so attentive, calling her up nearly every day, taking her out, sending her flowers and candy; then suddenly it had all stopped. And last night when she was at the movie with her sister, didn't she run right into him with some girl hanging on his arm and looking up at him as only blue-eyed girls can look at men!

She brushed away the stinging tears with a gesture of impatience and flung the book she had been reading across the room.

Then she got up, turned off the light and slid into bed.

The next morning there were dark circles beneath her big brown eyes that gave them a tragic expression and instead of the staccato little tap tapping her heels usually made as she hurried along to work, she moved listlessly this morning without animation or joy.

"Miss Newton, what happened?" asked Mr. Dedron, her boss, pulling out his watch as she entered the office. "I've been waiting for you for twenty minutes."

"I can't help it!" she was amazed to hear her voice say, "I know I'm awfully late and what can I do about it."

Tears were standing in her eyes and her voice broke on the last words. It was just like old Dedron to come to the office on time the only morning she had been late in months.

"Let's take dictation first," he said more kindly a moment later, making a mental note to see that she didn't work overtime so much.

She had scarcely begun the first letter when the telephone at her elbow jangled in its important persistent way. With a jerk she removed the receiver from its hook.

"That you, Claire?" Dick's voice asked.

"Yes," replied the girl, too taken back to think what manner she should use toward him after his cool neglect.

"Is Mr. Dedron there yet?"

"Yes."

"Hang! I'm sorry. Well, anyhow, let's go to the beach tonight."

"Darned if I will!" said Claire with unmistakable vehemence as she slammed the receiver on its hook.

When she reached home late that afternoon she found Dick seated in his car waiting for her.

"Jump in, Claire," he called cheerfully, but she only flushed angrily and started up the stairs to the house. With a bound Dick had left the car and was at her side.

"Come on, Madcap," he teased, gently but firmly leading her toward the car.

She knew if she attempted to argue with him she would begin to cry so she permitted him to help her into the car. Quickly jumping in beside her, Dick threw in the clutch and they sped away. For the first few miles he said nothing, then placing a hand over hers he slowed down and began to talk:

"You know Claire I always thought you were a cute kid and I was goofy about you, but you seemed sort of wishy-washy. Fact is I got tired of hanging around a girl who never had any opinions of her own; but when you ripped out 'Darned if I will' this morning, I could have hugged you. You have independence of your own after all."

"Dick, is that really—why you—quit?" she asked breathlessly.

"Sure. Why not?"

"Oh, oh, oh, and I thought—" she checked herself suddenly.

"Come on, what did you think?" he said coaxingly.

He stopped the car and took both her hands in his. "Thought I liked that sort of girl?"

Claire flushed and nodded.

"Thunderation, no! No man cares for a namby pamby. But, say, did you really want me to—like you?"

Without waiting for her answer he boldly took her in his arms. "You imp," he laughed—and kissed her.

The Fable of Riding the Skyrocket

By GEORGE ADE

(©, Bell Syndicate.)—WNU Service.

ONCE there was a Man who played safe. He preferred to never lay down a bet unless the Odds were approximately 1,000 to 1 in his Favor. Before he tackled any Proposition he liked to gaze at it from all Angles and get the outward Aspect and inside Dope.

All of that Bunk about "Nothing venture Nothing gain" had not been in his Copy Book, but he remembered a luminous Page devoted to "Be sure you're Right and then go into the High."

Mr. Dawdell had always been cautious that way. He was not an ambitious Explorer, a reckless Experimenter or an intrepid Pioneer. For instance, he didn't go in for any new-fangled Didoes until they were five or six Years old and had been thoroughly tested and approved by all the Neighbors.

He never bought a Bicycle until after Autos came in. He wanted to be sure that they were safe to use and would stand the Wear and Tear.

Up to last Fall he wore a Derby. He didn't want to buy the Soft Kind until certain that the Fedora was more than a transitory Fad.

His Excuse for wearing Detachable Cuffs is that the Style may change back at any time from Attached Cuffs to Detachable Cuffs, and if it does he wants to have a lot of Detachable Cuffs all ready to wear. Here we have a Brand of Intelligence often encountered but seldom understood and less seldom appreciated.

Once he served on a Jury and held up the Verdict for Two Days because he felt sure that all of the Witnesses on Both Sides had perjured themselves, consequently he was not in possession of any accurate Information upon which to base a definite Conclusion.

Hatching Out His Role.

The only Reason he is alive now is that so many Drivers are good Dodgers because, when Mr. Dawdell gets out into the Street and it becomes a Question as to whether he shall hurry on across or beat it back to the Sidewalk, that is a Problem which cannot be settled offhand. He has to get out a Pencil and a Pad of Paper and work on it for quite a While.

Possibly you have heard of his famous Wager. On a certain Wednesday he laid Odds of 2 to 1 that the next day would be Thursday, but that Evening he heard a Rumor that the World was coming to an End, so at 11:30 P. M. he hedged.

Even from this Blue Print you may be able to corral a correct Line on Mr. Dawdell, otherwise known as Safety First. All he wanted at any time was a lead-pipe Cinch which did not involve any Element of Risk.

The Bull Market and the Real Estate Boom were simply made to Order for Birds of his general Description, it being a well-known zoological fact that the Village Miser who is afraid to put any Coin into the Building and Loan will always go to the County Fair and fall for the Shell Game.

It is the Concern promising Ten Per Cent a Month that brings all of that Mildewed Money out of the Stockings. To the Sure-Thingers all that is Real looks Counterfeit whereas the Phonies seem to be not only plausible but absolutely gilt-edged.

Mr. Dawdell had pinched out a Bank Roll and he was sitting on it to keep it warm. He was waiting for a Chance to double his Money over Night, but he didn't propose to rush into any speculative Deal until he knew that it was air-tight, sound and guaranteed. In the meantime he was watching the Stock Market and the Guardian Angel supposed to take care of Suckers was on a Vacation.

Everything had been going up and up. He watched the Ticker and the Black Board and the Newspaper Quotations and he could not refrain from making Mind Bets.

All Set for a Killing.

As, for instance, if he had bought 1,000 Shares of Milk Can Preferred on July 1st and held it until September 15th, he would have cleared enough to permit him to take on 5,000 shares of Bohunkus Steel Coil Common at the Low Point and hold it until just before the Holidays and then, by slapping all of the Velvet into Gilhooley Oil, Gas and Vapor he could have closed out early in February, just before the Break, with a total profit of, say $630,000 or in Round Numbers, $650,000, if not more. Making the Whole Thing well worth his time.

The only Reason in the World that he hadn't Played his Hunches and cleaned up a Ton of Jack was that he wanted to watch the Market for a considerable Period of Time and make sure that the Bull movement was to be continued and perpetuated Instead of a Spasmodic Reaction to certain evanescent Conditions, if you know what that means. If you don't, the Author will be unable to give you any Help.

Well, the upward Trend has been so continuous that even Mr. Dawdell finally knew that the Psychological Moment had arrived and that everything was set for a Killing. As nearly as he could learn Every one Else in the World had been loading it into Trucks and carting it away and now it was Time for him to get His.

So he conferred with some of those wise Insiders who did not know how to talk above a Whisper. They were shrewd Tipsters who got all of the good Information within a Day or two after it came out in the Newspapers. They asked Mr. Dawdell if he had come in Contact with the Rumor that the Inert Motor Co. intended to double Production, Declare a Stock Dividend, absorb the Dinkus Interests and close a Ten Year Contract with the Bazinsky Factory.

No, it seemed that Mr. Dawdell had not succeeded in dreaming any of these Pipe Dreams, but they were right in line with the general Optimism of the Market and helped to confirm his Belief that Inert Motors would continue to jump, possibly for Years to come.

On the very day on which he decided to set in his Stack, about 10,000 other cautious Gamblers, every one of whom had a Head shaped exactly like the Citrus Growth which was balanced on Mr. Dawdell's Shoulders, arrived at the same Conclusion by the Exercise of the same kind of Almost-Reasoning Powers.

An Expensive Wait.

There comes a Time in every spectacular Orgy of Inflation when a vast Flock of Lambs appear on the Highway, capering gaily and bleating in unison as it heads for the Slaughter House. The appearance on the Scene of these innocent and trusting Fauna, is always a Cue for the Thimble-Riggers, Manipulators, Banditti, Second-Story Men and Yeggs, who are carrying big Lines which cost practically Nothing, to slip the Green Goods to the Yokels, got from under and hot-foot to the Woods with Swag. The Idea being to Cop while the Copping is good.

How happy were all those eager Doodle Bugs when they learned that they could still purchase some of the Desirable Stock! They took it as rapidly as the polite and respectable Burglars could shovel it out to them.

Came a Day when those who had once owned the beautiful lithographed Certificates were in the dreamy Southland listening to cracked Ice, raving Promoters, and moaning Jazz, while the would-be Wallingfords were in their respectice Cellars counting the Lumps of Coal and wondering if there would be plenty of Reading Matter at the Poor House.

When the Dirigible exploded and the light-hearted Passengers were strewn all over the landscape, it was then that Mr. Dawdell, following his usual deliberate Methods, refused to believe what he had seen until there had been more or less Corroboration.

After the Stock dropped about two Miles and the Parachute refused to open, Mr. Dawdell, ever controlled by an Instinctive Caution, said to himself, "This may be just a temporary Slump, so I had better not do anything rash now or I may deeply regret it Week after next."

He decided to watch the Market for a couple of Months and then, if there was no Recovery, he would know for sure that the Bears had control of the Situation and it would be time to duck and, afterward, take a Lead Pencil and figure how he stood, if at all.

So he carefully avoided any headlong or hasty Procedure, waiting until Inert Motors had tobogganed from 181 to 64 before sending Word to the Broker.

He is now saving up another Roll, but when he gets it he is going to be more careful and not go against any Game of Chance unless he has a sure-fire System.

MORAL: If you want to buy Something and Somebody Else is too willing to sell it to you, look out!

"Mummies" Were Fakes

Sensational "mummies," alleged to have been dug up near Indian Springs, Georgia, and exhibited as survivals of an ancient civilization, were found to be frauds. Modern technical methods not foreseen by the village "archeologists," such as the X-ray, were used to disclose the internal "organs" of the "mummies," as consisting of wire, nails and other hardware.

"Uruguay"

The name Uruguay comes from two words meaning "bird's tail." However, this was named from a waterfall which was named because of its resemblance in shape to the tail of a bird.

DINING GETS JUST DESSERT!

In a world turned topsy-turvy, what could be more appropriate than an upside down cake! And if it's made with luscious discs of canned pineapple, set in a caramel goodness, browned to a golden whole, it's enough to right the appetites of any family.

And the pineapple upside down cake has much more than its mere golden goodness and simplicity of preparation to recommend it. Now that nutritional studies have found canned pineapple to be a valuable source of essential vitamins and minerals, an important aid to digestion, housewives and hostesses are seeking new ways of including pineapple in some way daily on the menu.

PINEAPPLE UPSIDE DOWN CAKE

⅓ cupful of butter
1 cupful of brown sugar
8 slices of canned pineapple
8 maraschino cherries
¼ cupful of chopped dates
¼ cupful of pecans (in perfect halves, if possible)

Melt the butter in a wide shallow pan or skillet. Add the sugar, distributing it evenly. Lay the pineapple, dates and pecans in this sugar mixture, and place a cherry in each pineapple center. Then prepare the Sponge Part—

SPONGE PART

4 eggs
⅔ cupful of sugar
⅔ cupful of flour
1 tsp. of tartrate baking powder
½ tsp. of salt
½ tsp. of lemon extract

Beat the egg yolks until light and lemon-colored. Gradually add the sugar which has been sifted. Fold in the beaten whites of 2 eggs. Sift the flour, baking powder, and salt together 3 times, and fold into the mixture. Fold in the beaten whites of the other 2 eggs and add the flavoring. Pour over the pineapple mixture and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until done. Let cool in the pan for 5 minutes before turning the cake out upside down.

NRA PLEDGE SIGN-UP PROGRESSING RAPIDLY

Display of Blue Eagle Campaign Emblems Increasing

Rapidly nearing the 100 per cent mark, Washington township business men and manufacturers, are this week pledging their support to President Roosevelt's campaign for national recovery. In more and more shop windows as the week progresses, are to be seen the blue eagled insignia of the NRA, as the proprietors receive their credentials marking them as cooperators with the administration.

Although, at the present time, businesses employing less than two people are not included in the list of those forced to comply, many of them have carried out the President's wishes by shortening hours of work to 40 a week.

According to reports from the larger cities, and word from authoritative sources, the only weapon to be used against non supporters for the present will be the weight of public opinion. The danger of a boycott against recalcitrant businesses is thought to have brought many of them into the ranks.

The enthusiasm of the nation's employers, in signing their pledges and securing their emblems is prophetic of the ultimate success of the venture. In the opinion of many merchants and business men the campaign should begin to reap profits by increased sales within a few months. Although they admit that they cannot justly afford to shorten hours or raise wages at the present volumne of trade, they are sportsmen enough to do their bit toward bringing back good times. Those who complain of the present low income, and use it as an excuse not to comply, will be more than willing to reap the profits when recovery is felt. It is to this end that public opinion will be felt.

According to President Roosevelt's message, this is a time of war within our borders, and an employer is either an enemy or an ally according to the action he takes in the recovery program.

Niles Fisherman Brings Back Splendid Catch

Spending Saturday evening and Sunday morning trolling near Martinez, Ray Peterson and Fred Vogelsang, of Oakland, came in Sunday night with a fine catch of channel bass.

Peterson's best one tipped the beam at seven and one-half pounds and gave Ray a twenty-minute battle before he gaffed it, Peterson's next best was around five pounds.

According to the fishermen, bait fishing was unsuccessful, the quarry biting only on spinners. Peterson said that he and Vogelsang profited by the experience of native fishermen of the straits, by following them about. Thus fish stirred up by the preceeding fleet bit lustily at Peterson's hook.

Peterson and Vogelsang slept on their craft Saturday night and began their most successful, trolling early Sunday morning.

Wally Ebright Bags First Buck of Season

The first hunter from Niles to bag his buck this season, and bring it back into town, was Wally Ebright, who, with Tony Alves, rolled into town at 8:35 Tuesday morning with a fat forked horn.

Ebright and Alves drove up the Alameda and awaited the stipulated hour of thirty minutes before sun-up. They had not long to wait. At 6:30 a. m., sighting the buck in the clear, Ebright fired once, bringing it down. Intent on securing another deer, Alves and Ebright continued to hunt for a short time. Alves said that they saw no more.

Ebright stated that they had to carry the buck only 200 yards. He guessed its weight at around 100 pounds.

UNTIL WE LEARNED BETTER

Until we learned better, we used to mix wood and steel in our car bodies and wheels.

It was the best way to make bodies—then. But the state of the art has advanced.

Of course, it is more expensive to make an all-steel body than to make a wooden frame and nail steel panels on to it. The better way involves an initial expenditure of several millions of dollars for new dies, which renders a change very costly. Cars, especially large expensive cars which are produced in small volume, cannot afford this, because the dies cost as much for one car as for a million. That alone explains why all-steel bodies are not used in all cars.

But our basic policy from the beginning is to make a good car better, regardless of cost.

For example, when we discarded wood-steel body construction, it was not because we lacked wood. We still have some thousands of acres of the best hard wood in America. Economy would urge us to use up the wood first, and then adopt the better all-steel body. But we decided that quality was more important than expense.

We weighed the reasons, for and against, before we made the change.

We could see only one reason for retaining a mixed wood-and-steel body—nailing the metal on, instead of welding an all-steel body into a strong one-piece whole. That reason was, it would be cheaper—for us.

Our reasons for adopting an all-steel body were these: A wood-steel body is not much stronger structurally than its wooden frame. In all American climates, wood construction weakens with age. Every used car lot gives evidence of this. Rain seeps in between joints and the wood decays. A car may have a metal surface, and yet not be of steel construction. Under extreme shock or stress the steel body remains intact—dented perhaps, but not crushed.

Steel does not need wood for strength or protection. Wood is fine for furniture, but not for the high speed vehicles of 1933.

In the Ford body there are no joints to squeak, no seams to crack or leak.

The all-steel body is more expensive—to us, but not to you.

By all odds, then, steel bodies seem preferable.

Wheels also have become all-steel. No one argues that an electrically welded one-piece steel wheel, such as the Ford wheel, needs to be "strengthened" by adding wood to it.

The one-piece all-steel body is the strongest, safest, quietest, most durable body made. That is our only reason for making them.

BANK OF AMERICA COMPLYING WITH NRA PLANS

Bank of America, with a total personnel of 6,000 Tuesday completed plans for instituting the forty-hour week for all employees covered by the NRA reemployment plan provisions and is filing with the San Francisco post office a certificate of compliance with President Roosevelt's campaign to shorten working hours and spread employment.

Tuesday's action climaxed a program instituted by the bank on July 21, when A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board, wired President Roosevelt that the Bank of America was in complete accord with the reemployment plan announced on that day.

A general order had been dispatched from the head office of the bank in San Francisco, directing the heads of 410 branches throughout the state to place the forty-hour week in effect on August 1. The hours during which the banks will be open are not altered by the order, in accordance with the president's reemployment agreement.

According to Frank Dusterberry, Centerville branch head, all employees there will immediately begin the NRA hour schedule.

Centerville Grass Fire Mystery Cleared Up

The mystery of Centerville's dubious blaze on Mattos lane two weeks ago was probably solved this week when a Centerville citizen told of seeing a car loaded with small boys roll away from the scene of the fire immediately before the flames appeared.

Although no identification was possible, the firemen at least have the satisfaction of knowing that they were called to a blaze set maliciously. The fire was all but extinguished by residents of the vicinity when the firemen arrived on the scene.

HODGKINS FORDS LOSE TO MOVERS SUNDAY 15-8

Stopped in their winning streak by their own lethargy, as well as by a tough opponent, the Hodgkins Fords Sunday took a 15 to 8 spanking from the Macy Movers, of Oakland, runners-up in the class championship.

Although the Fords got twenty-two men on base during the contest, all but eight died on the bags. Several times, with two men on, the Ford batters popped up or fanned.

Spud Degermark pitched good ball, retiring eleven Movers and walking three. Wallace, of the Movers, gave free trips to seven Fords, and beaned three of them. When Wallace beaned them they stayed that way, Lebon looking like a camel for the rest of the game after he was hit.

Rose, second baseman for the Fords, was hurt badly enough to require medical attention when he was kneed by a sliding Mover in the fourth.

Fontes and Perry of the Fords led the list in the day's hiting. The former connected safely twice in three tries, and the latter three times in five. Mackey, of the Fords, got two for six and Jacinto got two for five.

Following is the box score:

Niles Youth Tells of World Fair Exhibits

A letter from Joseph Shinn, Jr., vacationing in Indiana, tells of the World's Fair at Chicago as disappointing in its displays and scope. According to Shinn, the exhibits contain little that is not already on the market and purchasable at the present time. He says that the state exhibits are particularly barren, and that the foreign buildings, with the exception of the Japanese, are somewhat disappointing. In discussing the Chinese exhibit, Shinn says that San Francisco's chinatown is by far more impressive.

On the whole, the exposition is rather dull, Shinn says, with the exception of a few high spots.

Shinn, a keen observer, made further comment on the social adjustmnts of the eastern states, and told of the modes of living in eastern cities.

MARBLES RETURN TO NILES AFTER 9000 MILE TRIP

Arriving back in Niles after a two months' vacation in the East, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Marble told their friends of their trip.

Marble stated that the trip as a whole was warm. He covered 9,000 miles, mostly through sunny weather.

After spending some time at Munnsville, New York, where Mrs. Marble had been staying with her mother for several months, the Marbles drove to Chicago and passed a week at the World's Fair. Marble praises the fair highly and was especially enthusiastic over the California exhibit in the states' building. He said the night-lighting effects were very effective.

Driving back to California by the northern route, Marble said that the roads throughout the Dakotas and Montana were not in very good condition, but quite passable.

On the return trip the Marbles stopped over for a day or so in the Black Hills district of South Dakota.

MISSION FIREMEN WHIP HAYWARD SUNDAY 6-5

Mission San Jose Firemen beat the Hayward Athletics 6 to 5 Sunday at Mission, when the game ended in the first half of the ninth inning, under the protest of the Athletics.

The Firemen had B. Telles on third and R. Boggini on second, when Steinmitz singled to right, scoring both men. The Hayward team claimed that Boggini ran off the base in scoring.

B. Telles, for Mission, was relieved by Silveria in the second inning after he had allowed four runs, three hits, walking two, beaning one and striking out two men. E. Lugue, for Hayward, allowed ten hits, struck out seven, walked five and beaned one man.

Goulart, Fontes, and B. Telles hit safely twice for Mission. Worth collected doubles in the game. T. Silva, of Hayward, helped his team by hitting three and Paroto two safties.

Quarter - Cent Share Gas Tax To Go To Cities

That the Town of Pleasanton will have its income increased by more than $2000 a year from the gasoline tax is expected as the result of a recently-enacted law.

The new law, allocating to cities a quarter cent share of gasoline tax money, in accordance with the number of cars registered, becomes effective August 22. Earl Lee Kelley, state director of public works, said that on October 1 the cities will get their share for the quarter commencing July 1, even though the new regulation does not become effective until next month.

A total of about three quarters of a million dollars will be distributed to the cities quarterly under the new law.

Investigations Being Made for Beer Licenses

Investigation of charges that beer is being sold in the unincorporated area of Alameda county without the payment of license taxes is being made this week by Constable Albert E. Vervais and Deputy Sheriff L. E. Van Patten.

Sheriff M. R. Driver was ordered by the Alameda County Board of Supervisors at their meeting Thursday of last week to make a check of all places selling beer in an effort to discover those who are handling the product without paying the necessary licenses.

There has been a noticeable decrease in the number of beer applications according to County Tax Collector Edward T. Planer, who said that for the quarter beginning July 1, only 134 permits have been issued in comparison with 168 for the previous quarter.

DANCE TO BE GIVEN SOON BY NILES FIREMEN

Having given no dance last year, the Niles Fire Department feels that it is high time that an evening of entertainment, sponscred by the firemen, should take its place in the social calendar.

According to Clarence Crane, chairman of the standing entertainment committee, the firemen are planning to give their dance sometime in the near future. No date has been set, and neither has the place been selected. Crane said that some appropriate hall in the vicinity of Niles will be chosen for the affair.

Heretofore the firemen have given their dance sometime in October, but owing to the fact that there was no dance last year, the committee fee's that the date should be earlier this time.

The entertainment committee members are: Clarence Crane, Ray Peterson and Frank Silva.

DRINKING TO THE SALES TAX

While the state was muddling, and shouting a great oath over the new sales tax, and trying to untangle all its multitudinous regulations, our governor was celebrating in Mexicali, in Mexico, just across the line from the great Imperial Valley. Not only was he playing around in his peculiar way in this sink of iniquity, but he was cavorting in the dirtiest joint in the dirtiest hell hole of the North American continent. He was in theA.B.C. Club, better known as the Owl, a gambling joint, with its rear door leading out into the yard of prostitution.

But this is nothing new. Rolph's taste for this kind of thing has been largely responsible for the necessity of a sales tax, and a thousand other taxes that he, and his administration, may go on in the same old way wasting public funds, and sinking the good name of California deeper and deeper into disrepute wherever the word, honor, is understood and respected.

Dispatches carried all over the United States tell that the governor of California narrowly missed being blown into—let us not say where—when he left the gambling joint and brothel at 1:30 a. m. by a bomb exploding in a saloon next door.

If the bomb had blown the Owl to pieces just a moment before it would have been just too bad, just too bad. Well, maybe.

FOREST CAMPS IN ALL PARTS OF STATE STARTED

(By WNU Service)

By late June 50,000 men are expected to be working in Civilian Conservation Corps camps in California.

That was the belief expressed recently in San Francisco by officers in the staff of Major General Malin Craig, commanding officer in charge of the Ninth Corps area. At that time there were 127 camps in this state in the national forest and state and private lands. Other area camps are located in Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho and Montana.

Today, General Craig looks at the huge map in his office upon which are 585 colored pins, each representing the location of a forest work camp, manned by approximately 200 workers. He has to personally see to it that each one of these camps is in charge of picked officers and specially enlisted men of the regular army, that every provision has been made to safeguard the health and physical and moral well-being of every man in the corps, and that adequate medical personnel has been detailed to give every man the dental and medical attention he may require.

These men are unused to army discipline, unused to the rigors of forest work, and must be shaped into the government's program of labor for keep and a dollar a day.

It is the army's duty to feed and house the men and supervise them while they are in the camps and the forest service's job to work them in the "fields."

They come from all walks of life, these young recruits, to the strangest army of its kind ever assembled in the United States. They are former cooks, aviators, newspaper reporters, students, day laborers. Practically all professions are represented in the corps.

Each man is particularly adapted to certain tasks and as nearly as possible he is assigned work he is accustomed to doing or likes to do.

The corps works five days a week in the field with two days off in which their time is pretty much their own. The five days a week are eight hour days. In the eight hours, however, is included time at meals and in going to and coming from their fields of endeavor, which in some cases are not adjacent to the camps. The work includes construction of roads and trails and the erection of bridges, development of fire lines, erection of live stock driveways, erection of ranger and guard stations, development of camp grounds, and reforestation.

WORK IS HARD

"Is the work hard?" an officer was asked.

"Let me show you a letter from one of the men we recently sent to the Yosemite camp," the officer said. The letter said that the work was hard but that the hours were good, there was much pleasure to be had and the food was good.

"Do they eat much?"

"Plenty!" the officer said. "The regular army gets 27 cents a day for food. The Civilian Conservation Corps worker gets 36 cents worth of food a day. One man ate three dozen eggs at breakfast the other morning." The officer insisted his statement was true and others of the staff backed him up.

On their two days off a week, the men are allowed wide freedom. They hunt and read and fish and play games. Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of sporting goods were bought for them and they make use of it.

OPEN SIX MONTHS

Where weather conditions permit, the work camps will remain open for a six months period and during that time the men will be supplied with clothing, food, housing and $1 a day pay. Of their dollar a day, however, about five-sixths of it will be sent to dependents so that others besides the men will benefit.

In addition to this money, the government is spending thousands of dollars in the sub-districts for perishable food, hay, lumber, hardware, etc., all of which goes into construction and maintenance of camps.

LOCATION OF CAMPS

Camps are located in the following sub-districts: Eureka, Fresno, Monterey, March Field, Rockwell Field, MacArthur, Sacramento, Marysville and Redding.

Under the former plans made by those in charge of the corps work, California was to have 166 camps in national forests, 12 in national parks, 33 in state forests and five in state parks. The plan, however, has been changed somewhat and there will be less camps in state forests, the state forester will announce in the near future.

There will be camps from National City in the south to Crescent City on the north.

JOBLESS START WORK ERECTING CONSERVATION CAMPS

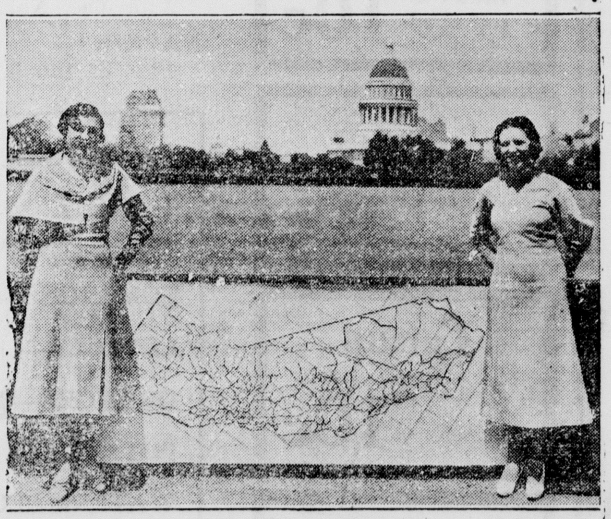
THOUSANDS OF MILES TO BE ADDED



At least 6600 miles of highways will be added to the state secondary system with the signature of Governor Rolph to a bill proposed to and passed by the legislature. The map above shows some of the miles to be added. The young ladies holding the map are Genevieve Henderson (left) and Norma Veglia, State Department of Public Works employees.

Red Indian Term

The term "hoochee" is from the Creek Hutchas, meaning a mark or design, as, for instance, Chattahoochee, meaning pictured or designed rocks.

It All Depends

Reverting to the subject of relativity, all we know about it is that a dog trot is slow until compared with a snail's pace.—Toledo Blade.

Voracious Birds

Penguins, the curious seabirds, are exceptionally heavy eaters, an 18-inch specimen tucking away five full-sized herrings at a sitting.

Envy

Envy shoots at others, and wounds herself. Envy and covetousness are never satisfied. The greatest mischief you can do the envious, is to do well. An envious man waxes lean with the fatness of his neighbor. Envy never yet enriched any man. Envy is the worst disease. Envy never has a holiday. The envious die but envy never.

Called Back

IT WAS the doctor who spoke. He said, "Pemberton, I have to tell you that your wife won't live through the night."

In order to hide his personal anguish and professional distress the doctor put into his voice a certain roughness. But as he stood in that dimly lit room in which the figure of Pemberton was bending forward with his face between his hands, he said to himself, "Oh, my God, where have we got to in medical science when such a beautiful thing must slip through our fingers in all the glory of youth?"

The doctor had been, and was still, desperately in love with Enid, and had not recovered from the sudden and utter collapse of his hopes when, having asked her to be his wife three years before, she had said these triumphant words: "But, my dear, haven't you heard the news? I'm going to be Mrs. Pemberton—the wife of Nicholas Pemberton, one of our country's greatest authors."

Since then he had resented Pemberton. Rumor had it, and he believed it to be true, that Enid and her husband were among the very few happily married couples within a radius of fifty miles of their old and charming house. During his concentration upon what had been of necessity nothing but a case, he had, however, tumbled upon something which pointed to the fact that there had been a skeleton in the most private cupboard of that old place.

And so, instead of leaving the room after making his statement, he shut the door and went to the fireplace.

"Pemberton," he said, "there's something behind all this which is defeating me. Your wife is entering upon the crisis of her illness. In ordinary cases it would of course be touch and go, although the odds would be with me. But in this case they are against me—heavily against me—because Enid hasn't the will to live. D—n it, she wants to die! This means—something, and I want to know what."

"It means that she wants to escape from me."

"Escape from you. Why? You've loved her, haven't you. Haven't you done every mortal thing to make her happy?"

"Yes. I have loved her. I still love her and I've done every mortal thing, so far as I had the capacity, to make her happy with me."

"Well, then, what do you mean?"

"I must sum up my failure in two most terrible words—too old. To which I must add that she has been forced to divide me with my work. My work has erected a barrier between us over which she has never been able to climb. Before this illness hit her I stood here late one night and prayed to God that she might obtain her freedom with some decent fellow nearer her own age."

The doctor stood aghast. No wonder he was being defeated.

"I must go back," he said. "She may want to die, but, by Heaven, I shall put up a fight against death with all the strength I have."

He went to the door and came back. How he hated this man!

"Here's a note addressed to you. I found it on the floor."

Pemberton took it.

The note was addressed to himself in the round, bland, schoolgirl writing that he knew so well.

"Pembie, my darling, you've dramatized all this. You've seen me with the eyes of a novelist from the very first. We haven't been living in life but in the pages of a manuscript. You have never been too old, as you have made yourself out to be. And if I resented your work because it took you away from me, each one of your books has been almost as much my child as it has been yours. You know I loved you when I married you and I adore and admire you now, but you made up your mind that the story must end unhappily and it must. I can do nothing but die. But even when I am dead I shall sit outside your door and waft my love through the keyhole. I've done this every day since you married me though you never discovered it."

You should have heard those creaking boards and seen the figure of that gaunt gray man as he plunged up that wide old staircase in a frantic effort to push aside that other gaunt gray figure which was standing by the bed!

"What do you want?"

It was the doctor who spoke, as the nurse rose to her feet.

"It's my fight," called out Pemberton, flinging himself on his knees and placing one arm with utter tenderness and sudden understanding over the flaccid body that lay on the bed. "Enid. Enid. I love you. Make the end of this story a happy one by living. Together we'll make a serial of this story which shall run on and on."

The little hand to which he had pressed his lips trembled and was withdrawn, presently to be placed like an inspiration on his head.

And although there was not a single creak from those old oak boards, Death went away from that house.

SALES TAX GOES INTO EFFECT TUESDAY

The two and one-half per cent sales tax voluntarily agreed upon by the Retail Merchants Asociation and the State Board of Equalization, went into effect in Washington township Tuesday morning.

The tax on "all tangible personal property" is so designed that the average amount gained by it will be two and one-half per cent of all sales. Following is a schedule of tax percentages. Consumers and merchants alike will no doubt be familiar with it before long.

On sales from 15c to 59c, 1c tax.

On sales from 60c to $1.05, 2c tax.

On sales from $1.05 to $1.49, 3c tax.

On sales from $1.50 to $1.90, 4c tax.

On sales from $1.91 to $2.30, 5c tax.

For each 40c thereafter, a 1c additional tax.

"All tangible personal property" is taxable if sold at retail. The tax, being a "buyer's" tax must be added to the price of every commodity, according to law.

Each retailer must make application for a permit to sell within thirty days. He is then granted a license, costing one dollar, which must be conspicuously displayed in his place of business.

At the end of each quarter the merchants is required to send in a sworn statement of his sales during the period and accompany it with a check for the amount of the tax, made payable to the state treasurer. If no report is made, an arbitrary assessment is levied, and a ten per cent penalty imposed.

Books of all retailers must be open to auditing by the board of equalization at all times.

Firehouse to be Painted, When the Paint Arrives

Rumor has it that the Niles fire house will soon blossom forth in a shiny coat of paint, if all present arrangements hold good. For several months the members of the department have said that they would wield the brushes if the commissioners would supply the paint. It is said that the paint will soon be forthcoming. When it does, the firemen will save expense to the district by slinging the paint themselves. If they are as good painters are they are fire-fighters, the building will get innumerable carefully applied coats.

MOSQUITO INVASION AVERTED WHEN PONDS OILED

A threatened invasion by several million mosquitoes was halted last week by Walter Walker, acting mosquito abatement district foreman in the absence of Roland Bendel, now on vacation.

Oil spraying of thirteen acres above Cole Marsh near Newark, killed adult mosquitoes which had already appeared and were about to leave the marsh. This area is ordinarily dry, but was flooded by excessive water draining from salt plants above Cole Marsh.

Other marshes in the south end of the county are in good shape and should give no trouble, Walker reported. During the week, 500 feet of ditch were dug at Jarvis Landing and at South Marsh near Alvarado.

JUDGE'S STOVE DE-SOOTED DURING SUMMER MONTHS

HAVING SERVED its annual purpose, that of warming up the court house on icy days, Judge J. A. Silva's diminutive stove, (revered for its decades of faithful radiation) has been reverently removed from its dias until the cold blasts shall again create need of it.

Similar to the little man who was always under foot, the Judge's stove has often been an unnoticed, hence serious, obstacle to hurrying deputies, but what it takes up in room during the summer it returns with interest by its glow in the winter months.

Judge Silva declares that when he retires from active life (if ever) he is going to take that little stove home, rig it up in his fireplace, and toast his shins before it. That's loyalty.

Although the scribe was not given the honor of viewing the venerable appliance in its summer resting place, he has heard potent rumors that the Judge has it under lock and key—swathed in cotton.

FIREMEN SUBDUE GRASS BLAZE THURSDAY

A grass blaze, origin unknown, last Thursday evening summoned the Niles fire fighters again to the vicinity of the Alameda creek. Starting on the west bank of the stream channel, the flames were threatening buildings and equipment of the Pacific Aggregates Gravel Company.

Bringing the blaze under control, the firemen allowed it to burn itself out, thus eliminating danger of fire in the same place again.

Continuing with their cleanup campaign of vacant lots in the town of Niles, the fire fighters Friday night burned off the lot between Second and Third streets, behind the Catholic church. According to members of the department, the initial zeal of the citizens in preparing their lots by cleaning around fences and buildings has slightly diminished.
